Worse Than the Lover.

"What is worse," demanded the lovely girl, disgustedly, "than a man who will make love to you, in spite of all you can do?"

It seemed to demand a reply, so the other lovely girl said:

"One who won't."

If Constipated, Bilious or Headachy, take "Cascarets"

Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, or sour, gassy stomach—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissues it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep.—Adv.

Irremediable.

"My hair is coming out dreadfully. Do you know any way to prevent it?" "No; you ought to have thought of that before you got married."—San Francisco Chronicle.

HOME

By SUSAN F. HAYFORD.

"For goodness sake, Jim Graham, what a looking room! If you aren't enough to try the patience of Job."

The usually soft voice was high-pitched and querulous.

"Why, what's the matter; what's up now?" inquired Mr. Graham from the depths of his newspaper.

"Well, if you would use your eyes you'd see what was the matter. Just look at that rug, and after I've cleaned all day, too." And his wife pointed an accusing finger at the mud tracks that spread across the floor.

He gave a hearty laugh. "So that's all, is it; well, I'm sorry, but come and give me a kiss and say that you forgive it this time." And putting an arm about the trim little waist he drew her down to the arm of his chair. But she was not to be so easily appeased, and with an angry jerk she pulled herself away.

"Oh, that's just like you—you never take anything seriously, and I work all day trying to keep things neat. Look at your coat on one chair, your hat right on the mantel and—"

Mr. Graham laid down his paper with a sigh.

"Well, Agnes, I suppose we might as well get this settled. I'm getting tired of being nagged every night lately. I never complain about what you do, and after all I furnish the house for a home," he ended angrily.

It was a very unfortunate remark just at that moment, and the tears filled Mrs. Graham's eyes in spite of her efforts to keep them back. "Very well, if that's the way you feel. I think I had better earn my own living—I did once without any trouble, and you can have your house just as you please," she said with sarcasm.

Her husband arose from his chair and spoke severely: "Don't talk nonsense; what is the use of making a fuss over nothing?"

"Nonsense—it's more nonsense to be a slave for a man, and I'm tired of it," she flung back over her shoulder as she hastened to the kitchen, partly to attend to the cooking supper and partly to hide the falling tears.

Presently her husband appeared at the dining room door in hat and coat. "You needn't wait up for me; I have a key. Good evening," he said coldly, and was gone.

"Wait, Jim," she cried, but the front door closed before she could finish the sentence.

Regardless of the over-brown chicken in the oven she put her head on the kitchen table and wept.

"Oh, why did I ever say such things! But then he might have known that I didn't mean them, and he didn't seem to care if I did leave; probably he'd be glad," and a fresh flood of tears came, but after a while she arose with an air of determination, and taking the done dinner from the stove consulted the mirror, to be confronted with very red and swollen eyes, and her new silk waist all spotted with tear-drops.

Half an hour later, a veil hiding her tear-stained eyes, she locked the door and started for her dear chum Isabelle's apartments, to let Jim see that she could get along without him.

She hurried along the avenue, intent on taking the car just coming in sight, then a fall and a sharp pain in her ankle.

From around the corner someone appeared, and a familiar voice was in her ear:

"Are you hurt, Puss? Tell me quick."

"Not much. Oh, Jimmy, where were you?" she gasped.

"Just been walking around the block the last hour," he replied carelessly. With his arm to support her she hobbled home in silence, but once inside the cheery living room the tears started afresh as her husband turned towards the hall to hang his hat and overcoat.

"Don't, please," she cried; "just throw them anywhere. I—I love to see them round; and, Jimmy, I was all tired and cross, and I truly didn't mean it," she concluded from the depths of his shoulder.

The dinner had lost its flavor, but the diners were radiantly happy enough to overlook it, and a fragrant cup of coffee made a pleasant finish.

"Jimmy," she said, "just think, married 'most a year and our first quarrel. Wasn't it silly?"

"So silly it will be the last," said Mr. Graham lighting his cigar.

His wife went softly over to his chair and put her arms about his neck. "We'll both do just as we like, won't we? And nobody'll fuss, for it's truly home, isn't it?"

She paused as her husband for the second time that evening, but now all unresisting, drew her to his knee.

"It's home where my little wife is," he ended.

Smoked Salt With Tobacco.

The strangest way of taking his salt was probably Doctor Parr's. Tal-foord records that he used to fill his pipe half with the finest tobacco and half with salt. After that it is not very surprising to learn that he smoked "with a philosophical calmness."

On one occasion when the two met, Charles Lamb's furious smoking of the strongest tobacco filled Doctor Parr with astonishment. Gently laying down his pipe, he inquired how Lamb had arrived at his power of smoking at such a rate.

"I tolled after it, sir, as some men toll after virtue," was Lamb's reply.—London Chronicle.

THIS is a topic we all hear now-a-days because so many people are inclined to exaggerate. Yet has any physician told you that we claimed unreasonable remedial properties for Fletcher's Castoria? Just ask them. We won't answer it ourselves, we know what the answer will be.

That it has all the virtues to-day that was claimed for it in its early days is to be found in its increased use, the recommendation by prominent physicians, and our assurance that its standard will be maintained.

Imitations are to be found in some stores and only because of the Castoria that Mr. Fletcher created. But it is not the genuine Castoria that Mr. Fletcher Honestly advertised, Honestly placed before the public and from which he Honestly expects to receive his reward.

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for infants and children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.
